BIG BATTLE IN FLANDERS

ALLIES ADMIT RETREAT

By HERBERT TEMPLE.
Personal Correspondent of International News Service.

LONDON, April 24.—German troops have renewed their drive for Calais. This is the construction by British military experts upon the sudden offensive of the Khiser's army in Flanders. Their assaults directed against Ypres and the allies' forces on the west bank of the Ypres Canal have resulted in victory for the time being at least.

British troops in Flanders have taken the offensive against the Germans and hard fighting is in progress at Langemarck and Steenstraate. This was announced in an official statement issued by the government press bureau today.

When the Germans made their sudden assault upon the Langemarck-Steenstraate front the Canadians were forced to fall back.

Four of their 47-inch guns were captured by the Germans. In their counter attack, however, the Canadians recaptured the guns, also taking many prisoners, including a colonel.

CANADIANS SAVE DAY.

The press bureau's statement, a report from British headquarters under today's date, says that the gallantry of the Canadians undoubtedly saved the situation. They suffered many casualties.

The text of the report follows:

"The fight for the ground into which the Germans penetrated between Steenstraate and Langemarck still continues.

"Loss of this part of the line laid bare the left of the Canadian division, which was forced to fall back in order to keep in touch with the right and neighboring troops.

In the rear of the latter have been

Big Finnish Steamer Sunk by a Submarine

STOCKHOLM, April 24.—The German submarine fleet resumed its activity in new waters today when the Finnish steamship Frack was torpedoed and sunk by a German under-water craft in the Gulf of Bothnia. The ship was bound from Stockholm to Abo with a cargo of iron. The crew is reported to have been saved. This is the first important vessel lost by submarine attack in Russian vicinity. The Frack was the largest merchant ship yet sunk by a German submarine—12,000 tons.

The steamer Frack was one of six which resumed their sailings between Sweden and Finnish ports Thursday, despite warnings that German submarines were operating in the Baltic Sea and the Gulf of Bothnia.

Pays to Carry Suit Case, Be It Ever So Heavy

He ran into City Hall police station at 5:30 and gasped to Captain Sullivan:

"My suit case. It's gone. I lost the wagon."

"Name and address?" asked the Cap.

"George Condos, No. 28 Kneeland street."

"And you lost your suit case, or your wagon, was it?"

"Suit case," said George, "I came in by train just now to the North Station. My suit case was heavy. I started up Canal street. A wagon was going the same way. The tailboard was down. I put the suit case on the end of the wagon. The driver never noticed. I walked along beside the wagon. I had no suit case to carry, so I lit a cigarette."

"Neat idea," said the station skipper. "What happened?"

"The wagon went up Washington and then Devonshire street. I kept by it on the sidewalk. That way was toward Kneeland street. And it was easier for me to have the suit case in the wagon."

"Much easier," said Captain Sullivan. "But what's the difficulty?"

"Back of the old State House. Lots of streets come together. Lots of wagons. I got held up at a crossing. I ran to catch my suit case wagon. But it had got ahead. I couldn't find it. It is gone. It is on its way with my suit case. The driver doesn't know it yet, maybe. It has $25 worth of clothing in it."

Europe to Send Peace Workers to America

By FREDERICK WERNER,
Personal Correspondent International News Service.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, April 24.—Influential representatives of neutral governments are soon to gather in the United States to inaugurate a widespread propaganda for peace in Europe. This movement is said to have the endorsement of President Wilson, though he has not taken any fresh initiative toward ending the war.

Publicists of the Scandinavian countries originated the plan, the International News Service is informed, and it was encouraged by prominent men of Holland and Spain.

Dr. Eridjof Nansen, the famous Norwegian explorer and former Minister from Norway to England, is expected to take a leading part in the conference. He will soon sail for New York, it is reported.

Woman Saves Aged Cripple from Fire

TAUNTON, April 24.—Mrs. Alice Lincoln, postmaster at the North Raynham postoffice, today proved herself a heroine when during a fire which destroyed the postoffice building she rescued an elderly cripple from the second floor after all escape had been cut off.

Taking Mrs. Julia Hayes in her arms, Mrs. Lincoln carried her down through smoke-filled hallways to the street, where she fainted. She was given medical treatment and later attempted to save some of the postoffice property.

Help was summoned from Taunton. For a while the fire threatened to reach a thickly-populated section near the burning building, and many of the occupants prepared to remove their goods.

MANY AID HUNT FOR LOST GIRL

The name of a Peabody town official, a married man and father of two children, was mentioned today in the mystery surrounding the disappearance last Tuesday of seventeen-year-old Esther Burbeck, sophomore in Peabody High School. For two hours Police Chief Grady grilled this man, who protests that his interest in Esther was "merely fatherly."

On account of a suicide note left by the girl for her parents, saying she was going to jump into Floating Bridge Pond, the sinister stretch of suicide water between Lynn and Salem, the police have been dragging the pond thoroughly, but without result.

Today Esther's father, John G. Burbeck of No. 30 Holten street, Peabody, and her brothers, Orville and Howard Burbeck, began a systematic search of the woods on the Salem side of the pond. They were assisted by many citizens. Encouraged by the failure of the police grapples to bring up the body of the girl, the father and parents took renewed hope that Esther may have wandered away in the pond woods.

Dynamiting the pond waters is now suggested as a final means of proving whether Esther did or did not end her life by leaping from the Floating Bridge.

Esther's mother gave pitiful expression of the suspense which hangs over the Burbeck home when she said today:

"This strain is terrible. We put in an awful night. At midnight the telephone rang. I thought surely we were to hear something. But it was only a friend, who wanted to suggest that the waters of Floating Bridge pond be dynamited, to settle the question whether Esther's body is there or not.

AUSTIN, Tex., April 24.—Seventeen bodies have been recovered in Austin and in surrounding cities, according to today's reports from the flood-swept district of Texas. Twelve others were reported missing. No trains entered or left Austin today. The flood was moving southward and many towns below were menaced by the rapidly rising streams. Estimates of the property loss are $1,500,000.

FLAMES SWEEP FAST THROUGH BUILDINGS

Fire swept the tenement district of South Boston along First and Second and L streets this afternoon, destroying the five-story factory of the Boston Mat Leather Company and setting fire to a score of three-decker tenement buildings.

Four alarms wee rquickly sounded and were followed by a fifth or general alarm shortly before 1 o'clock.

The fire started i nthe factory, most of which was of wooden construction. One hundred and fifty men and women employes had just returned from their lunch. It was believed that all escaped.

The factory was quickly destroyed and the fire leaped across Foirst street to the tenements, and down these the fire swept all the way to Second street.

Nearby is the big South Boston plant of the Edison company. Engine 26 and a hose wagon were caught in the flafes and had to be dragged to safety by firemen.

Occupants of the building occupied by the leather company were the Ellington, Curtis & Co, the Boston Metal Company and Michael F. Cahill, ferroll maker.

There was a large quantity of gasoline in the building and constant explosions hampered the firemen.

Hundreds of families in the South Boston tenement district began making preparations to move should the fire continue to spread.

four Canadian 4.7 inch guns which thus passed into the hands of the enemy, but some hours later the Canadians made a most brilliant advance, recapturing those guns and taking a considerable number of German prisoners, including a colonel.

"The Canadians had many casualties, but their gallantry and determination saved the situation. Their conduct has been magnificent throughout."

That the allies have been forced to retreat is admitted by both Field Marshal Sir John French and the Paris War Office, though they attribute the German's advantage to the use of gaseous bombs.

It is apparent that Germany, though possibly terribly weakened by the burdens placed upon her army in the western and eastern theatres of war, is still able to fight vigorously.

"CRITICAL MOMENT ARRIVED."

The German troops in Flanders now are believed to number 500,000 and more are steadily arriving. The opinion of the military experts here is that the German general staff has withdrawn great forces from the eastern theatre and transferred them to Flanders, as recent dispatches from Berlin have reported no late levies, though they assert that there are still 5,000,000 men in the empire who can be drawn upon if necessary.

"The critical moment has arrived," is the view expressed by the military correspondent of the Daily Mail. This statement represents general opinion in well-informed circles though no anxiety is manifested in any quarters. The plans of the Germans to make another attempt to hack their way to the channel ports have been known to the British War office for some time.

"SOMETHING WENT WRONG."

It was for this reason that the British took the offensive at Neuve Chapelle and Hill No. 60. Lord Kitchener endorsed these attacks, backing up Field Marshal French in his desire to strike the first blow. Both were successful, but something "went wrong" at Neuve Chapelle which in large measure upset the British plans.

At Hill No. 60, though the British captured the position, they held back from further advance. Then came the long-extended German attack in the direction of Ypres which is considered one of the keys to the coast.

GERMANS WEAKENED IN EAST.

With the Germans on the advance in the West, the general plan of operations laid down by the allies is being carried out. Russian hosts are again on the move. Late dispatches from Petrograd report action along almost the entire 800-mile battle line leading from the Baltic to Bukowina.

If the Germans have weakened their forces in the East to strengthen those in the West, it is almost a certainty that the vulnerable spot will be found by the Russian leaders.

While the belief still exists that a naval battle is soon to be fought in the North Sea, attention given to that situation and the Dardanelles has been diverted to the more important land operations almost at England's door.

Unofficial reports from Athens that the allies have landed troops at three points on the Turkish coast for operations against the Dardanelles are displayed by some of the newspapers today, but the government is maintaining silence as to the operations against Turkey.

GERMANS SUFFER HEAVY LOSSES AROUND YPRES

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK,
Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, April 24.—Heavy losses have already been inflicted upon the Germans in the fighting about Ypres. Dispatches from points south of the battle line state that fighting continues over a front of about eleven miles, but that the German attacks seem to be weakening under the fire of the artillery massed against them and that they are being forced backward.

A message from St. Omer estimates at more than 9,000 the German casualties in the attacks that resulted in their forcing the passage of the Ypres Canal. The German forces that crossed to the left bank of the Yser are being fiercely assaulted by the British troops, while east of the canal British and French troops are advancing toward the north and northwest.

The hamlet of Poelcapelle, which was occupied by advance guards of the Germans in their first plunge forward, has been recaptured by the English. The Germans were finally driven out early this morning after they had fought hand to hand with the English soldiers for five hours.

As the Germans retreated from Poelcapelle they came under the fire of the French artillery to the eastward and suffered heavy losses.

The French offensive in the Vosges is continuing with complete success. The village of Embermenil, near Avricourt, was recaptured Friday by chasseurs, who drove out three companies of German troops. Practically all the forest of Ailly, south of St. Mihiel, is now in the hands of the French, but the Germans are holding tenaciously to many of their trenches in the forest of Apremont, and hard fighting is still in progress there.

$1,250,000 Spent in Thaw's Nine-Year Fight for Freedom

Since Harry K. Thaw shot and killed Stanford White, June 25, 1906, it is estimated that more than $1,250,000 has been spent to free him.

Thaw was acquitted of the murder charge on ground of insanity on February 1, 1908, and committed to Matteawan. The fight to free him began three months later, and he twice carried that fight to the Supreme Court of the United States, without avail.

He escaped from Matteawan on August 17, 1913. He was deported from Canada three weeks later and arrested in New Hampshire. He remained there in custody of a New Hampshire sheriff until January, 1915, when he was returned to New York to be tried for conspiracy, a charge growing out of his escape from Matteawan. He was found not guilty of conspiracy and ordered returned to Matteawan.

Five writs of habeas corpus were procured by his attorneys after he lost a fight to be returned to New Hampshire. Adverse decisions were returned on two.

If he convinces a jury that he is sane, he will be freed. If he does not, he will have three recourses: An appeal to the Court of Appeals, an appeal to the Federal courts, a return to Matteawan, where, by convincing the superintendent he is sane, he could get a certificate to that effect and thus be released.

STATE WILL FIGHT THAW JURY TRIAL

NEW YORK, April 24.—The most determined fight will be made against submitting to a jury the question of Harry K. Thaw's sanity, it was announced today by the Attorney-General's office in a statement by Attorney-General Woodbury.

"It is the opinion of the Attorney-General's office," he said, "that the court is without discretionary power to grant a jury trial upon the return of a writ of habeas corpus to test the sanity of Mr. Thaw. I shall ask for a stay of the execution of Justice Hendrick's order granting such a trial until after the matter can be heard by the Appellate Court."

Supreme Court Justice Hendrick, who granted the application of Thaw's attorneys for a jury trial, set the date of the trial for May 17. This date was selected after a conference with Thaw's attorneys. The conference, however reckoned without the opposition of the Attorney-General's office.

With the application for a stay of the execution of Judge Hendrick's order, the least the Attorney-General's office is able to do is to postpone the date of the trial pending the decision of the Appellate Court as to the discretionary power of Justice Hendrick in the matter. The most that can be done by the Attorney-General's office is to have the order set aside, and again hold up the long-sought sanity trial by jury.

In spite of the determination of the prosecution to fight every move on the part of Thaw and his attorneys to restore Thaw to liberty, the decision of Judge Hendrick is considered in the light of preliminary victory for Thaw. Thaw maintains this decision is recognition of the right he has fought for ever since his incarceration in Matteawan.

Even in case of a jury decision adverse to Thaw, the fulfilment of the Jerome threat, "Back to Matteawan," would have been postponed for a month at least. Thaw is still in the Tombs, and his return to Matteawan before the trial by jury or before the jury trial order has been set ruled on by the Appellate Court is unlikely. In case of a favorable jury decision, the "back to Matteawan" slogan will have become an empty boast.

When Thaw was told of Justice Hendrick's decision he quietly announced:—

"Now I will prove that I am right. This will be very good news for my mother. My only regret is that the hearing will not take place earlier than May 17."

RUSSIANS STRIKE TOWARD MEMEL

By FREDERICK P. RENNET.
Personal Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, April 24.—A strong column of Russian cavalry has again entered East Prussia near Memel, and continues to threaten the German left flank.

The position in the south is entirely satisfactory. It is possible the Russians will merely continue to repulse the Austrian counter attacks in the southern Carpathians and that the main movement will develop elsewhere.

There are indications that we are on the eve of a new phase of the campaign. The Teutonic allies are carrying out a comprehensive regrouping of their forces to strike a sudden and vigorous blow at some unexpected quarter.

The Russians are seeking to anticipate this movement by straightening out their front in the Carpathians, and thus giving themselves greater freedom to manoeuvre.

Reports received by telegraph from Kieff tell of the visit of Emperor William to Bukowina. He arrived at Czernowitz by motor car and, after driving through the town, reviewed the troops and inspected the fortifications.

Russian troops are now only two and one-half miles from the Northern entrance to Uszok Pass, according to official reports received at the War Office today. Their artillery is now shelling the town of Sianki and the heights occupied by the Austro-German forces.

Hill No. 1,335, northwest of Sianki, has been captured by storm, but the heights to the east and west of the entrance to Nasok Pass are still held by the Germans and Austrians respectively.

Hill No. 1,335 was taken in a night attack led by Siberian troops transferred from the Vistula front to the Carpathian mountains. The Siberians rushed to trenches at the base of the hill at midnight, bayoneted their defenders and then charged up the slopes.

CHARGE DEATH TO MAN WOMAN AIDED

NEW YORK, April 24.—Mrs. Julia Heilner, wife of a wealthy Manhattan manufacturer, residing in Flatbush, is believed to have been slain by a man she befriended.

Last week she thought of aiding some of her German countrymen out of employment because of the war and communicated with the Seamen's Church Institute. Joseph Hanel, who had applied at the institute as a steward of the Vaderland, out of work, but who is actually an ex-convict, recently released from a Pennsylvania prison, was sent to the Heilner home. The family treated him with great kindness.

Mrs. Heilner was found with her skull crushed in with a beer bottle, and she had been strangled with a clothesline. Two diamond earrings had been torn from her ears and the house robbed of many valuables. The police are searching for the man she befriended.

When the crime was committed no one was in the house except the victim, the murderer and two Siberian wolfhounds, pets of the husband. It was discovered through Miss Helen Burd, a young woman who had at times been the companion of Mrs. Heilner. The woman's will and deeds to valuable property in Germany were also stolen.

BELIEVE MISSING GIRL IS ALIVE

although she had been practically an invalid for several years and had undergone several operations on her hip. We hear that she had told friends she was discouraged, but we never knew she felt so despondent as the note she left would indicate."

Chief of Police Burckes of the Lynn police declared today that he is confident that the body of the Burbeck girl is not in Floating Pond. Moreover, he declared that even when he ordered the pond to be dragged he was confident that the body was not there. Chief of Police Grady of Peabody expressed the same belief.

Both police chiefs think that the note left by the Burbeck girl in which she told her parents she was going to end her life because she was a burden to them, was a deliberately planned ruse to distract attention from her real whereabouts.

TOOK "FATHERLY INTEREST."

According to the schoolmates of the missing girl, she had been seen so much in the company of this man that it formed the principal topic of conversation among them for some time past. She had been seen frequently in this man's automobile, and often walking with him.

Chief Grady announced today: "It is true that I have talked with a town official about the disappearance of the Burbeck girl. We were in conference nearly two hours. To questions that I put to him he answered, 'I acted only in a sort of father interest in the girl.'"

If the girl is still alive it should not be difficult to trace her. She has suffered from hip trouble, and walks with a pronounced halt. This alone should make her easy to identify.

It was Thursday night that the girl's hat was found near Floating Bridge. The same night the missing girl's parents reported her disappearance to the police. The hat was later identified by Orville Burbeck as that of his sister.

John Burbeck, father of the girl, and one of the most respected men of the town, said: "The suspense is terrible. I can't believe that my little girl is in the pond. I think she has wandered somewhere. She has suffered much. I think possibly she brooded over her hip trouble more than anything else. She feared another operation possibly. The finding of the hat and the note book look very much like suicide, but really I can't believe it. She had no boy friends. She stayed in the house with her mother most of the time.

De Reszke Host to Prince in Cellar

Kaiser's Fleet Is Reported in British Waters

LONDON, April 24.—A German Admiralty statement that the German fleet has been cruising in English waters is believed by naval experts here today to explain the British order stopping traffic with Holland and giving notice that certain British ports may be closed at a moment's notice.

The German Admiralty statement reads: "The German high sea fleet has recently cruised repeatedly in the North Sea, advancing into English waters without meeting the sea forces of Great Britain."

British naval authorities are inclined to scout the idea that the Germans have ventured any great distance from Helgoland. In view of the comparatively restricted North Sea area, however, repeated movements in the direction of the English coast would undoubtedly afford the British Admiralty anxiety.

This would be especially true since the German raid in which a fleet succeeded in shelling towns on the east coast, later escaping, although the second raid, in which the Bluecher was sunk, proved less fortunate for the Germans.

In the meantime the Zeppelins are making their reappearance along the east coast of England. Reports from Belgium show additions recently have been made to the Zeppelin squadron and that the dirigibles are in constant use as scouts.

VILLA STAKING ALL ON BATTLE

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—General Villa has assembled at Aguas Calientes, for his coming battle with General Obregon, 30,000 troops with large supplies of ammunition and the strongest equipment of artillery he ever has had in one place. This information was received in Washington today in confidential advices from Mexico.

According to these advices Villa and Angeles are staking their control of every important post in Central and Northern Mexico, from which they have withdrawn garrisons, on their ability to crush Obregon.

It is stated on high authority that General Angeles and General Urban have gathered at Aguas Calientes the best troops from all of Northern Mexico, together with ammunition, the lack of which is said to have caused Villa's defeat by Obregon a week ago at Celaya.

At the same time, General Palafora, in command of between 5,000 and 10,000 Zapatistas moving northward from Mexico City, is reported to have cut off General Obregon from communication with Vera Cruz and to have destroyed the railroad twenty miles west of Pachuca. The greater part of this Zapatista force is said to be preparing to attack the reinforcements sent from Vera Cruz to aid Obregon. Obregon has about 12,000 troops, but is reported to be in desperate need of ammunition.

"TO MY PEOPLE"

Being the Transcript of a Message given by Celestia, known to many as "The Goddess," and the Maiden from Heaven.

LET me come into your hearts. Do not refuse me entrance. Draw close to me and listen, (You will listen) to my words whispered in your ear. I am talking to you and for you mainly. And I am come to tell you that all shall be well for you.

You may wonder why I talk to you like this—my very being here may amaze you. But there are reasons more than you know. All around you I hear voices shouting that you are lost in spirit and mind. So mistaken—what mistakes!

I say that you are good, essentially and at soul. And I know in my heart of hearts whereof I speak.

Are you troubled now even so lightly? Does your conscience gnaw? Does some petty or great misdeed recur to your imagination?

Oh! that just by reading these words, you might feel the gush of deepest emotion, such as prompts me and will make me powerful to save you.

I am brought from my heavenly home for you and to encourage you. All my years (maybe thousands) I have been waiting for this opportunity to comfort you. And I come now, not as a preacher or an Evangelist, not as a sermonizer or a lecturer, not as a writer or a player. Like my patron saint, Joan of Arc, I am here to fight the forces of evil.

Let me come into your life, your everyday existence. Let me accompany you to your shop or your office or into your kitchen. I have so much to say to you, that I am flowing over with it. I have so much to promise you, so much to give you, that all your worries and sorrows will melt away.

I have a light that dispels all darkness and it is Truth. I have a wand that causes all anguish and mourning to fade into nothingness and it is Faith. I have a magic lamp that brings your heart's desire to you, and it is Hope. I will present all to you, if you will take them.

Oh! Do not turn me into the wilderness, for you will find the wilderness yourself.

SUNDAY SAYS HIS CREED IS 'H-E-L-P'

PATERSON, April 24.—"Billy" Sunday talked to 11,000 persons in his tabernacle during the day and gained 221 converts.

His biggest success was not in the tabernacle. It was at a luncheon in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. and attended by 200 of the most prominent and influential business men of the silk city, some of whom had never heard him, and opposed him and had declared they wouldn't darken the doors of his meeting place.

The Rotary Club gave the luncheon. When it was over not one of his erstwhile opponents failed to eulogize him. Some of his remarks there were:

"I suppose some of you think I am a rip snortin', ringtailed grandstand player and hell roarer. Some say I actually make people laugh in the pulpit, instead of going around with a tombstone under one arm and a corpse under the other.

MAKES "HELL HOWL."

"When I was converted twenty years ago I loaded my oratorical gun with words not so eloquent or polished as the nickel plated, homilitic exegetic ammunition of the rifle of 'higher criticism,' but I'll tell you, boys, when I pull the trigger hell howls.

"I don't care if you cuss or discuss me. All I want you to do is to live right. Between me and my grave there will be never an inch of compromise or retreat. I am a business man like you, as well as a preacher.

"I try to put business principles and hard sense into my religious talks. My religion can be spelt in one word, in four letters, H-E-L-P."

Bill told his hearers that they could make their business better and their town better by right living.

"Each of you owes it to this city to radiate something which will make the community better for your having lived in it."

TELLS OF TIMID WOMAN.

In a sermon on "The Timid Woman," she who dared to touch the hem of Christ's garment as He passed and was cured of her disease, he told how the hog dealers of Christ's time protested against the ruination of their business when He cast the devils out of men and the devils passed into the swine and 200 swine rushed into the sea and were drowned.

"They were just like the booze sellers of today," he exclaimed. "They don't care for their fellow-man to become better; they don't care for the uplifting of their city. All they want is their business."

Then he spoke of people running after various new religions. "They chase old Doc. Unitarism," he said, "Old Doc. Christian Science, Old Doc. Theosophy, old Doc. Psychical Research and the rest.

"I know that my religion, the plain old Gospel of Christ, has saved millions, and so I say to them, 'Go out and show me that your religion can do the same. Show me the goods before your Uncle Fuller buys any of them."

It was not the timid woman's act of touching the gown of Christ, Billy exclaimed, that caused her cure. It is not baptism, no religious formula, that saves souls. "It is the Christ that is in the act," he said. "It isn't taking the sawdust trail, it is grasping my hand. It is that Christ is here and that in your act you approach Him and receive forgiveness."

PLAN REWARD FOR GIRL'S CAPTORS

ALTON, N. H., April 24.—Relatives of Evelyn Jones, the fourteen-year-old girl who told a remarkable story of having been attacked by two men and left unconscious, are planning to offer a reward for the arrest of her assailants. They express much indignation that the officials have dropped the investigation, and state that they themselves will pursue the case with vigor.

Evelyn tonight said that she had never denied her original story, although the county officials state that their cross-examination of her led them to believe that she had been romancing. Her father says that she never told a lie, and he believes her implicitly in this.

He says that he deplores his lack of means to make a thorough immediate search of the countryside, and is bitter against the authorities for dropping the investigation.

Fred Varney, known as "Dummy," the young man who found the girl apparently unconscious, says there can be no doubt that she was attacked and dragged where she lay. Other investigation convinces friends of the truth of her story.

Dr. F. C. McLaughlin, who attended the girl when she was first found, insists that she was suffering from the effects of some drug, and that she was not feigning.

Harrison Frobeck, at whose house Evelyn boarded, says it is preposterous to suppose that the girl would have stayed of her own accord out on the ground alone at night. He says in his opinion it is very strange that the officials should discredit her story, and that she could have no possible motive for lying.

Mrs. A. Worthen, whose home is on the mountain road near where the girl was found, says that she heard voices as of men and a feebler voice as of a girl, and she is convinced that the attack was made exactly as Evelyn described.

CAPTURES TWO ARMED THIEVES

PORTLAND, Me., April 24.—Patrolman John J. O'Brien single-handed, arrested Patrick Sullivan of Boston, teamster, thirty-one, and John B. Wilson of Chicago, a baker, twenty-six, despite the fact that Wilson was armed with a revolver and that Sullivan had a jimmy.

The patrolman finding the door of No. 98 Middle street ajar, went in and heard a slight noise, but no one responded to his call, "Who is here?" and he suddenly turned on the gas and saw Sullivan behind a counter.

He drew his revolver and said, "Come out from there," and hearing a noise at one side turned and saw that Wilson was drawing a revolver. He covered him and said, "Throw down that gun or I'll fire," and was obeyed.

He had the two men covered but could not arrest one and leave the other to jump on him and so waited until an Italian came to his assistance, to whom he handed his revolver. Sullivan made a dash for the back door, but was stopped and ironed by the patrolman, who then ironed Wilson.

As he left the store with his prisoners Wilson said, "If I'd got the drop on you things would have turned out differently."

It is believed that the children will be able to survive the shock.

When the police arrived the strangers could not be found and an examination showed all the boxes intact.

MAY CONTINUE CABOT WILL FIGHT

Dr. and Mrs. L. Vernon Briggs will confer today with their attorney, Sherman L. Whipple, to decide whether to carry to the Supreme Court the fight to have set aside the will of the late Louis Cabot, which was decided against them by a jury which took twenty-three hours to make its decision.

"The exceptions taken by us are being carefully considered," said Mr. Whipple. "Under the law we have twenty-one days in which to present them to the Supreme Court as the basis for a petition for a new trial. Whether or not we shall take such action, has not yet been decided."

The decision of the jury upheld the will in every particular. If the verdict stands, the property of the late Louis Cabot, Mrs. Briggs' father, will be equally divided among his seven Mrs. Briggs' sister. The other grandchildren are the children of Dr. and Mrs. John W. Bartol. Mrs. Bartol is Mrs. Brigg's sister. The other grandchild is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Briggs. Six-sevenths of the property will go to the Bartol family, and one-seventh to the Briggs family.

Wife Accused as Slayer of Georgia Pastor

WILLACOOCHEE, Ga., April 24.—This section is in a fever of excitement today over the murder of Rev. Allen Haskin and the arrest of his wife on the charge of murdering him. Mrs. Haskins is in jail awaiting a hearing.

Rev. Mr. Haskin was shot through the heart while asleep and with his little child huddled closely to him. The child was unharmed. The tragedy was not known until Mrs. Haskins notified the city authorities that her husband had been murdered.

The evidence upon which Mrs. Haskins is held is purely circumstantial. She said she was asleep in an adjoining room and did not hear the shot.

$22,500 VERDICT FOR ALIENATION

If a widow is awarded $22,500 for the love of her husband who has been dead for more than a year, what would have been the amount of the award were the husband still living?

This question has arisen as a result of the verdict by an Essex county jury, for $22,500 in favor of Mrs. Maude F. Lannigan, who sued her father-in-law, James F. Lannigan of Lawrence for alienating the affections of her husband, James F. Lannigan Jr., who died in November, 1913.

The trial of the case, heard before Judge Quinn and a jury, lasted four days. The verdict is one of the largest ever returned in a case of this kind in a Massachusetts court.

Mrs. Lannigan, who is a former South Boston girl, and who while a resident there was known as the "Beauty of the Peninsula District," sued for $50,000, on the grounds that her husband was induced to leave her by threats of disinheritance on the part of her father. With their separation, which occurred about a year before her husband's death in November, 1913, the latter returned to live with his parents. William R. Scharton was counsel for the plaintiff.

The marriage of the couple several years ago caused a sensation. She was the daughter of a South Boston hotel keeper.

ROOSEVELT ON GUARD AGAINST TRAP; THINKS HE'S 'COME BACK'

By L. V. S. RUCKER,
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 24.—Theodore Roosevelt of Oyster Bay and the United States, today felt that he had "come back" and his adherents agreed with him.

But the William Barnes legions professed to have saved the best of their attacks until next week's chapter of the story, beginning at 10 o'clock Monday, and the issue is still in doubt.

Has the Colonel, who held the spotlight for a week and chased the European war off the front page, "put one over" or is William M. Ivins, the wily Barnes chief counsel, laying a clever foundation for trapping the discoverer of the Rover of Doubt?

There was the puzzling problem in the minds of those who for a week have followed the course of this amazing political finish fight.

None of the principals in the Barnes-Roosevelt imbroglio was in town today but Colonel Roosevelt, and he was incommunicado. Onlookers at the sensational $50,000 libel suit were still in doubts whether the colonel had put his opponents into a blue funk, or was to be led into a blind alley—a sheep bound for the shambles.

BARNES CONFIDENT.

The Barnes followers, however, appeared very confident. It was hinted that Barnes has a submarine attack to deliver at the ex-President, but is saving his ammunition until he "sees the whites of his eyes."

In other words, Mr. Ivins has in mind a few questions that he is sure will confound the colonel and offset the heroic impression he has made, but he is withholding them for his parting shot.

For four court days—twenty-four hours—the colonel has talked without restraint, writing into the Onondaga County Supreme Court and megaphoning to the world political secrets of the Empire State's G. O. P. that are amazing. He has told how he became governor through the aid of Senator Thomas C. Platt and B. B. Odell and William Barnes. He has told how he was elected president in 1904 through the aid of J. P. Morgan, H. C. Frick of the Steel Corporation, Jacob Schiff, H. H. Rogers of Standard Oil, Andrew Carnegie, Thomas Fortune Ryan and many other millionaires whose names are household words in Wall street.

He has fixed the limit of legitimate campaign funds, all the money that is necessary to carry on the work of a campaign, no more.

But William Barnes has not spoken and it is possible that he will have much more political history than the Colonel cares to. Also the further cross-examination by Mr. Ivins may cause Mr. Roosevelt to bare some political doings he does not intend to.

ONLY JUST BEGUN.

Indications were today that the trial will la st considerably longer than was thought, at least three weeks, unless Justice William S. Andrews curtails the testimony.

Colonel Roosevelt will resume the stand Monday for further cross-examination by Mr. Ivins and it is said the lawyer is not nearly through. He intends to lead the Colonel through his career to date, including his African and South American trips.

Mr. Barnes has said that he will insist on taking as long as the Colonel doesn't least a week.

The lawyers on both sides were invited to spend the week-end at the farm of Justice Andrews, one of the finest in Onondaga County, but they were too busy. They expect to be entertained by Justice Andrews tomorrow. Colonel Roosevelt went to the Onondaga Hotel this morning for a conference with John M. Bowers and others of his counsel. Mr. Barnes is in Rochester with his sister, but Mr. Ivins and others of Barnes counsel were very busy today in their hote theadquarters preparing further cross-examination for the colonel on Monday.

MAKES CHARGES AGAINST J. D., JR.

By International News Service.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 24.—Letters and telegrams exchanged between John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and officials of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, which have come into the possession of Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the United States Commission on Industrial Relations, contain revelations bearing on the recent Colorado coal strike of so alarming a nature as to decide Mr. Walsh to recall Mr. Rockefeller to the stand when the commission resumes its public hearings in Washington May 4.

The correspondence shows, Mr. Walsh said:

That John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who testified before the commission in New York and also before the congressional investigating committee, that he kept his hands off the situation and had no knowledge of situations in the coal strike fields, was in reality the directing mind in the struggle throughout.

That he exercised a personal influence which extended even to the State House in Denver and presumed to dictate letters that went out to the President of the United States and of the Governors of States over the signature of the Governor of Colorado.

That he withheld from the Department of Labor in Washington information asked for when Secretary Wilson sought to avert the strike before it began.

That he knew on admission of his agents in the fields that the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company controlled the prices and fixed conditions at the mines.

That constant and full telegraphic reports and long letters of particularization covering every phase of the contest and the proposals for settlement were sent to him from the first and throughout the period of the strike.

That he informed the mine executives that he had refused Secretary Wilson's offer to mediate and had decided to support them in their stand.

"Elaine" in Song Is the Newest Hit

Spring and the inspiration due to the popularity of the motion picture serial, "The Exploits of Elaine" have combined to produce a real song hit in "Elaine, My Moving Picture Queen." The song takes its name from the heroine of the photoplay serial and has been dedicated to Miss Pearl White. Not only is this new song hit a capital dance number, being particularly adapted to the one-step, but it is thoroughly tuneful and highly original. It is easy for the average voice to render. Miss White was so much pleased and impressed with the song that she sent an autographed photograph to the writers and the reproduction of the photograph will appear on the title page of the song sheet. Any music store can furnish the song, or a copy will be mailed, postpaid, for six two-cent stamps sent to the Star Company, P. O. Box 1740, New York city.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were inclined toward weakness in New oYrk when that market opened and the Boston list was irregular. There was a great deal of speculative interest in New York in Interboro-Met. issues and both common and preferred did some fast fluctuating. There was a wide opening in Inspiration Copper and it sold a high record price.

Within a few minutes there was some improvement in the tone of the New York market and gains there included Canadian Pacific ¼, Chesapeake & Ohio ⅜, New Haven ⅝, Reading ¼, Union Pacific ⅛, American Locomotive ¼, Goodrich ½, Interboro Met. common ⅛, Mexican Petroleum 1, Westinghouse ⅞ and Baldwin Locomotive 1.

Among recessions were Amalgamated ¼, American Smelting ⅛, American Sugar ⅛, Atchison ⅛, Baltimore % Ohio ⅜, Chino ¼, "Katy" ¼, Missouri Pacific ¾, Northern Pacific ⅜, Pennsylvania ⅛, Utah Copper ¼, Bethlehem Steel ½, General Motors ⅝, Maxwell Motor ¾, Pressed Steel Car ⅜, Studebaker ⅛ and Rock Island ⅛. U. S. Steel, Southern Pacific and N. Y. Central were unchanged.

Most issues were higher in Boston and among advances were Allouez ¼, American Woolen preferred 1, Butte & Superior ¼, Calumet & Arizona ⅛, Granby 1¼, North Butte ⅜, United Fruit 1 and U. S. Smelting ½. Declines included Calumet & Hecla 5, Quincy 3 and Alaska Gold ⅛.

DOING MORE BUSINESS.

Clearing house returns indicate that more business is being done in this country, returns to the Financial Chronicle from Boston, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Chicago, Baltimore and New Orleans for the week ended yesterday showing an increase of 4.4 per cent, compared with the corresponding period a year ago. New York showed the largest increase, it being 7.3 per cent. New Orleans came next with 6.7 per cent, indicating how much more movement there is to trade in the South.

RAILROAD RECEIVERS.

Receivers are now operating nearly 26,000 miles of railroad in this country and the capitalization of the lines so managed totals more than $1,500,000,000. The big roads are Rock Island, 'Frisco, Wabash, Pere Marquette, Chicago and East Illinois, International and Great Northern, Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, and there are about a dozen others. The Rock Island is the most important of the group, operating 8,328 miles of rails and being the largest single road which ever went into receivership.

THE VIEW OF BOERSIANER.

Regarding the position of this great transportation corporation, Boersianer writes to the Boston AMERICAN: "In finance, high and low, there are two kinds of graft. One, the boldest and least contemptible, is represented by what was done and attempted by the Rock Island and Frisco people. When the Messrs. Moore, Reid and Leeds inflated the original Rock Island shares trebly, arbitrarily swelling $75,000,000 to $225,000,000, their plain purpose was to make a 'killing.' There were numerous precedents. The Steel Corporation for one had put out $500,000,000 of common stock which was aeroform financially and hopeful psychologically. Promoters at that time were sure the country would validate what was in reality only a row of ciphers.

"The United States did make good in many instances. It grew economically and thereby fulfilled the expectations of long range or long betting promoters. But in such instances as the Rock Island the country could not deliver for reasons other than intrinsic. The fiscal management was notoriously incompetent from the beginning. For several years the operating department was defective. The coup, therefore, was foredoomed to failure. What occurred last week—the receivership—was inevitable the day the property changed hands years ago."

Actors Unite to Aid Benefit Fund; Clear Over $6,000

Thanks to a wonderful bill and the exceptionally good management of Daniel Frohman and a board composed of all the local theatrical managers, the Actors' Fund Benefit yesterday netted the large sum of $6,000.

The program was varied. It was what you might call theatrical chop suey. There was Lillian Russell, looking as pretty as a picture, who gave a talk to the ladies on how to take it off the hips and put it elsewhere. There was Christie MacDonald, who played her own accompaniments and sang Annie Laurie. There was also a most thrilling performance of the third act of "The Queen of the Highbinders," an old-fashioned melodrama in which George Fawcett, Milton Sills and Grace Carlyle were featured.

"Tonight's the Night" furnished a bunch of pretty girls, all the principals and most of the big numbers in the show. Julia Arthur appeared in the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet." She looked very youthful in the calcium glare and read her lines with great beauty. Ernest Glendinning, who sings ragtime, dances and otherwise disports himself in "A Modern Eve," was the Romeo and a romantic and convincing Romeo [illegible].

Hazel Cox from "A Modern Eve" sang "The Love of a Tugboat for a Steam Yacht," a song written by Ray Cox, her sister. There was a burlesque problem play entitled "The Banker's Wife," in which Osa Waldrap, Bruce McRae and Leigh Denny recited trite and grandiloquent lines with great seriousness.

The courtroom scene from "Common Clay" was given by John Craig and Mary Young and their company, and half a dozen big acts from Keith's and Marcus Loew's Theatres contributed to the festival.

Gabrilowitsch in Symphony Program Plays Pleasingly

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

A Symphony program without a Symphony is more rare in Boston than in other cities where the orchestra concert is not taken so religiously. Yesterday the MacDowell "Indian" suite occupied the place of honor. The soloist was Ossip Gabrilowitsch, who played two numbers, the Mozart concerto in D Minor, and Weber's concert piece in F Minor. Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," and a descriptive piece entitled "The Steppe" by Noskowski completed the bill.

The MacDowell suite is not played as often as it deserves. Its rare instrumental colorings, its strange and original themes and its national characteristics should bring it frequently before American audiences. Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" is one of the most fascinating of this extreme modernist and is one of the most popular of concert pieces. "The Steppe" was last played in Boston under Doctor Muck eight years ago. It is as vividly descriptive in its way as the Indian suite and the Debussy number.

Gabrilowitsch has been one of the successful pianists of the year. He is big, earnest and brilliant and his playing yesterday was distinguished in every respect.

Art Is Displayed by Stage Dancers

That Boston now possesses a school of stage dancing of the very first rank was most convincingly demonstrated at Jordan Hall last evening when Maria Paporello and her pupils gave their first public entertainment.

Mme. Paporello presented Edward Ferrari Fontana, the celebrated dramatic tenor of the Metropolitan and Boston Operas, in operatic numbers, accompanied by Roberto Moranzoni, the chief conductor of the Boston Opera, and more than a score of pupils.

Mme. Paporello's pupils displayed amazing grace and skill in ballet work, and particularly in the difficult art of toe dancing. Among the most successful might be singled out Eva Moynahan, Marie Maynard, Alice Wood, a delightful infant, Rosalin Wood, Frances Purcell and Madeline Dever. Mme. Paporello herself did dancing which was very suggestive of Pavlowa, whom she resembles in many ways.

David Abrams, who is a brother of madame, added to the general enjoyment by his famous impersonation of a cat, which he has done in several big Broadway productions. There was a good orchestra, conducted by Gaultiero Vabi.

KEEP HEADS CLEAN

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S Reports are to be marked for cleanliness as well as for conduct & studies.

You cannot clean them with oils, liquids or drugs. They only dirty the hair and endanger the lives and eyesight of the children. (Physicians claim that over half the blindness and eye troubles among children are caused by their use.) Fine combing pulls the hair out and ruins it. School Authorities request that mothers follow the only safe, sure, sanitary way recommended by Physicians, which is to wash the hair regularly every week with FITZGERALD'S HAIR SOAP. This Medicated Shampoo is made especially for this purpose, and it is the only thing that will kill all nits, vermin and their eggs or larvæ that may be in the hair, curing even the worst cases, and then wash them thoroughly out along with all dust and dirt, keeping the hair always clean, healthy, soft and fluffy. DANDRUFF is caused by a parasite, and this soap is the only thing that will DISSOLVE DANDRUFF and the parasites which cause it, and then wash them all out of the hair; it thoroughly removes the cause and also the disease, keeps the hair always clean and healthy, prevents its falling out, and promotes its luxuriant growth. LADIES EMPLOYED in stores, factories and establishments where dust and germs are flying around, and where they come in contact with all kinds of people, find this Soap indispensable. Always in a white tin box. Refuse all substitutes. Two sizes, 25c. and 50c.; worth its weight in gold. At all druggists or by mail, of Fitzgerald Soap Co., Collingswood, N. J., if your druggist will not supply you. SAVE THIS NOTICE.

Federal Owner Has Cardinal Option

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 24.—Philip DeCatesby Ball, financial head of the St. Louis Federals, holds an option which he obtained two weeks ago from Schuyler P. Britton on the St. Louis National league club and its real estate.

The option was obtained by a prominent St. Louis attorney, representing Ball in the matter alone, and while Mr. Britton will not admit that this is a fact, definite assurance that it is a fact was obtained from the official acting for Ball in the deal.

Pittsburg Releases Two New Players

PITTSBURGH, April 24.—"Syd" Smith, catcher, and Jesse Altenburg, outfielder, were released by the management of the Pittsburgh National League baseball club. Smith, who was the leading catcher in the American Association last season, was released unconditionally, while Altenburg was sent to the Youngstown Club of the Central League for further seasoning.

Eastern Y. C. Race to Start at New London

The ocean race of the Eastern Yacht Club will start from New London on June 26, instead of Newport.

The start is to be made the day after the college regatta. On the following Tuesday the club's annual regatta is to take place off Marblehead and the annual cruise from Marblehead to Bar Harbor starts July 2.

Dr. Roller Fails to Last As a Boxer

MONTREAL, April 24.—Dr. B. F. Roller, the wrestler, engaged in a boxing bout here with Jim Esson, the big Scotch wrestler, and was knocked out after eight seconds of fighting in the first round, when Esson landed a short-arm uppercut. The bout was to have gone ten rounds.

Leonard May Pitch Today
Day Off Helps Red Sox

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

"Dutch" Leonard will probably be uncle Bill Carrigan's pitching selection when the Red Sox battle the Athletics at Fenway Park this afternoon, while it looks as though either Pennock or Bressler would do the hurling for the Mackmen.

Farmers out our way didn't get enough rain yesterday to moisten the sprouting grass, b'gosh. Yet the game at Fenway Park was postponed on account of wet grounds!

There must have been some ulterior motive for calling off the festivities. Doubtless Manager Carrigan had the say and perhaps, if the truth were known, Uncle Bill wanted to give his men a much needed rest.

The Boston team began training at Hot Springs on March 6. It left the Spa on April 2, barnstormed its way up North, left Cincinnati after a Sunday game there on April 11, jumped to Richmond, Va., for an exhibition on Tuesday, rode on a sleeper to Philadelphia that night and opened the American League season next day. Then they went to Washington for a series and returned home Thursday morning and lined up against the Athletics Thursday afternoon.

The boys were all tired out. They showed it in their preliminary practice on opening day. Under ordinary circumstances the players would have been full of pep with the eager fans applauding them. Showing off before the opening day crowd would have been meat and drink to them. But there was a languid feeling that must have been the result of too much traveling on railroad trains and too much living in hotels. They were dead in their actions.

So Called Game Off.

To be sure they won the game—thanks to Mr. Murphy's $20,000 muff—but they were tired for all that. So when a couple of drops of rain fell yesterday morning it is possible that Uncle Bill, the sturdy manager of the Next Champs, made sure of the fact with the aid of a microscope and hastily called the game off on account of "wet grounds."

The Red Sox and Athletics now have two games to work off later in the season—the tie game at Philadelphia last week and the postponed game of yesterday. Both managers probably feel that the teams will then be in better shape to give a first-class exhibition than they are at the present time.

But there will be a battle this afternoon unless it rains pitchforks. They don't postpone Saturday games unless they absolutely have to do so.

This brings us down to a little speculation as to the probable pitchers today.

LEONARD READY SOON.

It is pretty nearly time that Dutch Leonard was in shape to show his left-handed shoots and southpaw curves. The fact that he was not in condition to go in the box when the season opened was a keen disappointment to President Lannin as well as Manager Carrigan, but it seems he caught a cold in his arm about the time the team was in Cincinnati.

Dutch took a good workout before the game on Thursday and looked pretty good. It is possible that he will go to the firing line today. But it is good betting that he will not start until he is fit. Uncle Bill doesn't care to take any chances with the arm that led the American League pitchers last year. If Dutch doesn't pitch, Ruth may be given another chance.

With Leonard going at top form and with Joe Wood back in shape the chances of the Sox copping the pennant would be increased 50 per cent. It must be confessed that Carrigan's pitchers have not been going particularly well. Foster was knocked out of the box in Washington, but he came back a few days later and won from the Senators.

Shore was hit hard by the Athletics on Thursday, but most of the balls they cut to left field were bad balls close in, and nine times out of ten they would either be missed entirely or would hit close to the handle of the bat and roll harmlessly at some infielder. But that's the way it goes. Shore had plenty of stuff, but the Mackmen were hitting him in spite of everything.

For the Athletics Shawkey may be sent to the firing line, or Pennock may try again.

Lynn English to Have Crew This Year

Lynn English High School will have an eight-oared crew this season and the boys are highly enthusiastic of developing a winning boat.

The members of the Farragut Boat Club have offered to give the boys assistance, offering them the use of their racing shells, and also to assist in the coaching. At a meeting of the Farragut Boat Club four boys from the high school (Captain-elect Henry Wall of next year's football team, Captain Charles Crockett of this year's eleven, John Murphy and Albion Hogan, football men, all of whom have had experience at rowing), attended and discussed the matter.

Golf Tourney Starts at Lexington Today

The opening round in the tourney for the season's trophy, a newly inaugurated event, will be played this afternoon at the Lexington Golf Club links in North Lexington. The play will be handicap medal, and during the season there will be six rounds, with the final round on October 9 to play for the trophy, the six winners of the monthly plays to contest for the prize.

Huntington to Enter N. H. Interscholastics

The Huntington School track team will compete in the New Hampshire State College interscholastic games. A full team will not be entered, as several of the track stars are on the baseball squad. Charley Zeigler will, however, chop baseball for a few days to prepare himself for these games.

$19,000 Offer for a Gibbons and Packey Go

NEW YORK, April 24.—The newly organized American Sporting Club intends to make the other fistic emporiums step around a little if they want to obtain the best talent. Paddy Donnelly, who is being backed as manager by the owners of the building, was authorized today to offer Packey McFarland and Mike Gibbons a $19,000 guarantee, with the privilege of splitting 65 per cent. of the gate receipts between themselves. Donnelly said today that he is sure his bid tops any offered the two stars so far.

"I don't take any stock in Ad Wolgast's yarn that he is representing a Wisconsin syndicate with a bankroll of $26,000," said Donnelly. "Ad is talking through his kelly, that's all. My offer of nineteen thousand is absolutely the best so far. I know that it tops Bily Gibson's bid. As far as I can find out he offered the men eighteen thousand. Along with my bid I stand ready to post $2,00 in cash—none of that check thing—with any sporting editor in New York to go as a show of good faith.

The boys can split that if I fail to put on the contest. My backers wan to obtain the best talent or shut up shop. Nothing could be fairer than that. They've got the money to spend and I'm one of our nicest little dispensers."

Out in Chicago they don't believe the men ever will meet. Packey failed to keep an appointment with Mike the other day, 'tis said, and the latter went back to St. Paul in a huff. It is Packey's move now.

BRAVES BATTLE FOR THIRD GAME

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—Local "fans" are still wondering when the Phillies will be tripped up. They have now eight straight wins to their credit, not having lost a game since the National race started. Pat Moran is receiving congratulations on all sides for the wonderful showing of his men.

Dick Rudolph was unsuccessful in his attempt to put the damper on the Phillies, although he came mighty near accomplishing the feat. An unusually large crowd saw the game and rooted untiringly for the home team. Especially the playing of Bancroft was loudly applauded.

Today, Manager Moran will send Mayer to the mound in the belief that he will keep up the winning streak. Moran declares that the Phillies will win ten straight easily and then go after a record. With Mayer on the job tomorrow, Moran says, Alexander will be used next and the ten straight will be a realization.

Manager Stallings will not make known his pitching selection until warming-up time, but stated that Paul Strand would probably be assigned to the task of stopping the raving Phillies. During the ceremonies Sherwood Magee contributed some classy catches which made Moran wish that he was back in a Philadelphia uniform. At the bat, Sherwood also gave a good account of himself.

At that, the win over the Braves was a rather fortunate one for the Phillies. Rudolph should have won if pitching is considered. He had it all over his opponent and only the bunching of hits in the second inning gave the Moran clan the big end of the score.

"The Rabbit's" Column

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—No one can make me believe these Phillies can win the pennant. If you look up the records you will find that it is no common thing to see a dark-horse team start out with a great rush at the beginning of the season. But the records will also show that nine times out of ten (nineteen out of twenty would be more like it) the team falls away to nothing before the season is half over.

* * *

The Phillies led the league for half the season three years or so ago and at that time they had a much better team, relatively, than they have at present, but they faded away toward the end.

* * *

If Pat Moran—but I'll let my friend L. C. Davis of St. Louis tell it in rhyme:

Today a well-known citizen
Was scanning the "IF" table;
He rubbed his eyes and then remarked
"This reads just like a fable."
For, at the head of all clubs
Appeared the well-known Phillies.
If Pat Moran
Should lead the van,
'Twould give us all the willies.

Joe Benz, of the White Sox slabbing forces fears that he is about to be stricken dumb, and the other night fled to his home, in Chicago, where he will place himself in the hands of a throat specialist.

Ever since he joined his team this Spring, Benz's voice has been failing him, until now he can speak only a little above a whisper. His affliction is supposed to be the after effect of an attack of typhoid fever last fall, which cost him fifty pounds in weight, and almost cost his life.

Benz is so worried that he is almost useless to his team, so he was allowed to beat it home.

Al Demaree says he has changed his style of pitching. He beat his old teammates, the Giants, the other day, while working for the Phillies and next day he said:

"I didn't pitch ten curve balls to the Giants yesterday. My curve wasn't working good, and after Lobert sloughed a couple of long fouls into the stand in the first inning I was afraid to use it, though I fanned Robertson on a curve. I depended mostly on my fast ball, with only a few curves and fewer slow balls.

* * *

"The fact is I have changed my style of pitching this year. I have gone back to the style I used in 1911 and 1912. In 1913 I depended a lot on slow curves and lobs and got away with it. Last year I tried the same thing and didn't get away with it. This year I have gone back to a fast ball and speedy curves, with only an occasional slow ball. Then again, I am heavier this year than ever before, and maybe that has helped some."

* * *

They say the Cincinnati Reds are pulling the rough stuff and getting away with it. On Sunday they had seven stolen bases against the Cardinals, and the way they worked it was to have the man at the plate interfere with the opposing catcher when he went to throw.

They'd better not try to pull any of that stuff when they meet us.

EGAN MAY JOIN BRAVES TODAY

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—Dick Egan, the new infielder purchased by the Braves from Brooklyn, is expected to join Manager Stallings here late today.

Egan is expected to become a very valuable member of the World's champions. He was with Cincinnati in 1913 and was a sensation.

The reason for the purchase, although not given, is believed to be the temporary loss of Captain Johnnie Evers and the absence of a first class utility infielder, now that Fitzpatrick has become a regular.

Dick hails from sunny California, and made his debut as a big circuit man with the Cincinnati Reds. While with that team he played every infield position with the exception of first base, but usually was to be found on second base, where he stood second in fielding for the year 1913, with a percentage of .972, and during that season hit at a .282 clip, and all in all proved himself to be one of the most valuable men of the Cincinnati team.

Following that around-the-world trip he was reported as flirting with the Feds, and this fact had much to do with the sale in 1914 to the Brooklyn team.

While with the latter organization conditions were not to his liking and as the result he slumped both in the field and at the bat, his fielding average for the year being .914 and his batting .227.

COLLEGE STARS IN BIG GAMES

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 24.—With the cream of America's college, school and club talent competing, the first day of the two-day relay carnival of the University of Pennsylvania on Franklin Field was marked by some thrilling performances, which aroused the enthusiasm of the ten thousand spectators to a high pitch.

The winners of the more important events were widely distributed, but Pennsylvania won her share of the honors as Howard Berry carried the Red and Blue to victory in the Pentathlon. Bob Ferguson, the speedy Penn sprinter won the 440-yard hurdle race, and the University of Pennsylvania team captured first place in the American College championship sprint medley race. Chicago was the only other starter in this event.

The American College championship distance medley relay was won by Yale, the Blue team covering the two and one-half miles in ten minutes and twenty seconds. Chicago, Penn, Lehigh and Princeton finished in the order named.

In the special events other than the 440-yard hurdle, H. White of Syracuse won the 56-pound weight contest with a heave of 27ft. 4½in.; S. Graham, Columbia, won the hop, step and jump, covering 44ft. 7in.; K. McCutcheon, Cornell, was first in the hammer throw, hurling the bulb 157ft. 6in.

The discus throw in the pentathlon event was won by Lamb of Penn State.

Today's events include among the championships: two-mile college relay; one mile freshmen college relay; one mile college relay; four mile college relay; pole vault; high jump; javelin throw; shot-put; broad jump and discus throw.

Queen Quality Again Represented by Team

After a very successful season last year, of sixteen games won out of twenty-three, the Queen Quality team of Jamaica Plain is out again this year to meet the fastest semi-pro teams in New England.

The management promises the local fans a still faster team than they had last season, although some of the best college men were in their line-up. The officers in charge of the team this year remain the same as last season, John Godsell, manager; Frank W. Price, assistant manager and secretary; Arthur McCaffee, captain.

They are at present preparing their schedule for the coming season and are desirous of hearing from the best semi-pro teams in New England. Address all communications to Frank W. Price, care Thomas G. Plant Company, Jamaica Plain. Telephone Jam. 190.

To Decide Title.

The Harvard fencing championship will be held on Monday, May 3, in the Hemenway gymnasium. Two cups are offered for the winner and the runner up.

Harvard and the United States Naval Academy will match oars on the Severn River late this afternoon when the varsity eights of both colleges will race over the Henley distance of one mile 500 yards.

Wray's Cambridge crew has been the guests of the Middies since Sunday and therefore has had a splendid opportunity to acquaint themselves with the vagaries of the river under varied conditions.

Today's matinee engagement will be the climax of a week of duel struggles between the sons of John Harvard and Uncle Sammy's future naval officers and a win for the Crimson will give the visitors a clean sweep, for already have the Annapolis standards in the past few days been trailed in a flurry of Harvard dust in baseball, tennis and lacrosse. The race means much for both participants; the Middies being outspokenly on the defensive because of their setbacks in these other sports; and the Harvard oars seek revenge for the half length victory snatched away from them over the same stretch of water last Spring.

SHIFTS IN NAVY CREW.

The exact time of the race is still undecided, but the chances are that the men will be sent away at 4:30 o'clock and the course set up river. A high bank on both sides protects the course and there should be little kick coming over the conditions overboard, although the waters at times during the week have fussed up quite lively now and then.

Coach Dick Glendon of Annapolis has been unfortunate in losing three of his best oars through the ravages of probation which only recently necessitated a complete rearrangement of his regular crew, one which shifted Captain Culbert from bow to stroke in an effort to conserve thoroughly the fighting qualities of the eight. Last Saturday Princeton defeated this crew but considerable improvement is reported in the trial spins this week.

Three members of last season's victorious craft are seated in today's spin: Overesch at No. 2, Harrison at bow and Captain Culbert at stroke. Only Morgan and Harwood of Harvard's present eight rowed in the losing race of last April, but fighting Captain Harry Murray, Johnny Middendorf, Ken Parson and Chick Lund were members of the second Crimson crew who right handily vanquished the Navy subs last year.

HAD SAME TIME.

The second eight's time was exactly the same that the Navy varsity made in defeating the Harvard regulars and many were the conjectures of what might have happened had these boats met instead of the order programmed.

Following the race, the Harvard squad will leave for Baltimore, where a dinner and dance has been arranged at night in their honor. All hands will return to the battle of the books at Cambridge Monday, when college opens after the Spring recess.

HARD LUCK.

The magnate is counting the gate receipts
As the rooters are filing in.
He chuckles in glee and his glad heart beats
As he loks on his pile of tin.
He counts up the coin with a soul aflame,
But he suddenly says, says he:
"If every game were the opening game
What a wonderful game 'twould be."

The opening game of the season has a strange fascination. Men attend it in spite of the fact that they know a lot of song boosters will be there.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 20, 1920—Frank Baker, the slugging third baseman of the Athletics, who announced his permanent retirement last Fall, is thinking about returning to the game.

TAMPA, Fla., March 1, 1918.—Charles W. Murphy, who retired from baseball several years ago arrived here from Sarasota today and ordered several changes to be made in the Cub lineup. "I have nothing to do with the Cubs," he said, "but if they don't brace up pretty soon there will be another shakeup." ...

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 17, 1917.—Ed Walsh, the famous White Sox pitcher, visited Bonesetter Reese today. "I only wanted to get a few kinks out of my shoulder," he said. "With a little hot weather my arm will be as good as it ever was."

NEW YORK, Aug. 30, 1922—Christy Mathewson won the deciding game of the season when he shut out the Cubs today, 1 to 0. He didn't have anything on the ball and was hit freely except in pinches. This probably will be his last season, although McGraw has offered him a three-year contract.

CINCINNATI, O., April 1, 1925—Charles Taft, in an interview today, denied the report from Chicago that there would be a new grandstand on the West Side. "After a thorough inspection of the stand," he said, "I have found that a fresh coat of paint and a pair of crutches will hold it up for another season. If I find it necessary I am willing to go to the expense of putting a new shingle on the roof."

UNIONS MAY ROW AT EXPOSITION

The Union Boat Club management is considering the proposition of entering its first eight into the National rowing championship regatta which is to be held this Summer in San Francisco in connection with the Panama Exposition. It is a dead certainty that Captain Paul Withington will lead his crew over the Western course if the men in his craft show the power and staying qualities necessary for a look in at high titular honors in their daily spins along the Charles and in their races at the American Henley in Philadelphia on May 22 and at the Invitation regatta at Harvard on May 29 and 31.

The club has had a first and second shell in the Cambridge waters for more than a month, headquarters being established at the Weld Boat Club. Coach Haines is again in charge.

With the first fortnight of rowing completed, prospects for one of the best crafts that ever wore the Union colors seems promising. By far the best oar in the shell was Ferguson, who led the Cornell varsity crews for two seasons. Phillips, who rowed in the same boat at Ithaca with Ferguson, was also stabled in the Union eight, but both men for evidently found the strain of coming back too much and to all intents have lately given up rowing for this year.

Efforts are being made to form a double and a centipede crew for the Henley regatta as well as to send over one or two good single scullers.

The Unions will resume their practice spins today and will work daily excepting Sunday from now until the Philadelphia races.

The order of the eight starting tomorrow will be: stroke, Gardiner; 7, Salstonstall; 6, L. Withington; 5, P. Withington; 4 Ayer; 3, M. Peabody; 2, C. Peabody; bow, E. Harding; cox, Abeles.

Harvard Golfer in Semi-Final Round

ABSECON, N. J., April 24.—Lawrence Cannon, Harvard; Maurice Risley, Seaview; Oswald Kirkby, Englewood, and H. A. Sands, Merion, will play today in the semi-final round of the Spring tournament at the Seaview Golf Club. In the second round Risley defeated his clubmate, Henry McSweeney, 3 up and 2 to play; Cannon won from Dr. E. H. McCall, Seaview, 6 up and 5 to play; Kirkby defeated J. H. Clapp of Chevy Chase, 8 up and 7 to play, and Sands won from H. W. Hemphill, Seaview, 2 up and 1 to play. James C. Parrish, Jr., of the National Links, who tied with Risley for the low medal score in the qualifying round yesterday, was eliminated by Sands in the first round, 2 up. Sands negotiated the course in 70 strokes, equalling the low score of the qualifying round.

Famous Jockey Dead in South

RACELAND, la., April 24.—James Lee, colored, once famous as a jockey, is dead at his home here. Seven years ago Lee rode all six of the winning horses in one day's meet at Latonia. On the New Orleans track he was a star performer, riding five winners on each of two days the same week. He was penniless when he died.

To Decide Rowing Dates on Wednesday

The dates for the annual regatta of the Boston Interscholastic Rowing Association will be decided at a meeting of members at the B. A. A. next Wednesday afternoon. Most of the schoolboys favor May 24 and 26 and these dates will probably be adopted.

Al Shubert Wins.

NEW ORLEANS, April 24.—Al Shubert of New Bedford, Mass., won from Arthur Simone of New Orleans after a twenty-round grueling fight here. Shubert was knocked down in the third round and Simone had the advantage in the first five. The gong saved Simone in the eighteenth.

M'VEY HOPES TO BEAT JEANETTE

Sam McVey expects to be returned a winner in his twelve-round bout with Joe Jeanette which will be staged before the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. The French boxing favorite has been doing some good work in the ring during the past year and believes that he will prove a little bit too fast for Jeanette.

Boston "fans" are anxious to see McVey in action. He has spent most of his time fighting in foreign lands during the past six years and has made quite a reputation by his good work.

In Jeanette, McVey will meet an old rival. These men have engaged in a number of battles and have usually given satisfaction. Just now Jeanette is fighting in grand style as he proved when he disposed of Sam Langford at the Arena a couple of weeks ago. Joe realizes that McVey is one of the world's best heavyweights but he is not the least bit bashful in stating that he believes that he will grab off the premier honors.

WILLARD'S LIFE STORY
Champion Likes Boxing Game
AS TOLD BY HIMSELF

By ED W. SMITH.
Well Known Fight Referee and Ring Expert.

Herewith is presented the eleventh instalment of Jess Willard's story of his own life, "How I Won the Championship." The first instalment appeared in the AMERICAN of Tuesday, April 13.

His story covers the Kansas Giant's private and ring life completely from his birth up to and including the now famous Havana battle.

HOW I WON THE TITLE—NO. 11.

The story now gets down pretty well to the time that Jack Curley's syndicate managed to snare Jack Johnson into a match for the title, and I will have something to say of the incidents leading up to that and the culmination of the plans in the city of Havana on April 5, 1915.

But before I get into the closing chapter of this series I want to say a few words for the boxing game, its followers and supporters and the sport in general.

Often I am asked the question and generally by doubting persons who know little or nothing of boxing:

Do you really like boxing as a profession?

The question is usually emphasized in such a way that it implies that I could possibly think of being enamored of such a thing.

Now I'll reply to them.

I love boxing.

As for it being a profession to be ashamed of, I will say right now that it is being legalized in many of the most enlightened communities in the United States, to say nothing of the foreign countries.

I never found anything in the game to be ashamed of, and won't as long as I stick to the plan I mapped out early, of taking good care of myself physically and in all other ways—especially morally.

I'm not challenging the opponents of boxing to give me any arguments against the sport. I do not like to argue and am convinced that boxing has so many good points that the arguments which bring up its bad features are more than offset.

Summed up, I believe that boxing is the greatest of all sports, the one that draws the greatest crowds, the biggest gates and stirs up the most intense interest.

Likewise, I am very fond of baseball and go to see it whenever there is an opportunity. It is a great sport, clean and thrilling at all times and worthy of the high place it has in the regard of the American people.

But of football I cannot say as much. It is a one-sided game to my mind. Any where from two to eleven men have the privilege of jumping on one of the opposing side. That makes a bad game of it, to my way.

Now what is fairer than a boxing match where you have but one man to watch? Two men equally matched in weight and skill can present about as stirring a contest as any red blooded man would care to see.

And I defy any one to find any brutality in championship contests. Take the Havana contest, for instance. It was as clean and straight a battle as any one would wish for. While there was plenty of desperate punching on both sides there was little or no blood. No punishment that made either of the contestants look bad enough to disgust a spectator, and I'll venture that every one of the women there, and there were hundreds of them, would be quite willing to return again and see the next championship if it could be decided in beautiful Oriental park.

NEW YORK, April 24—Harvard will wind up its Southern trip this afternoon with a game with Columbia University. Columbia has Smith, its star pitcher, all groomed for today's contest, and expect to score a victory over the crimson nine.

Captain "Winnie" Frye will be on the points for Harvard. Frye worked part of the Maryland Agricultural College and Annapolis game and is now in fine shape for a hard game.

Dick Harte will be given a tryout at third today against the boys from the Morningside section of New York. Fripp's work at third on this trip has been of the rankest variety. His fielding has been loose and most headless, while his helplessness with the stick is pitiful.

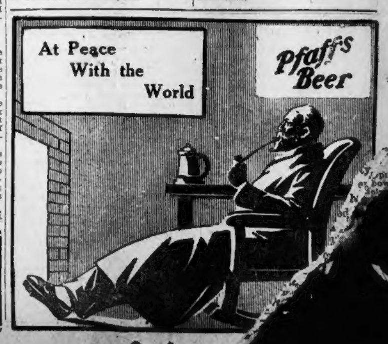

Charlie Hann, the former Harvard player, is covering first base for Columbia. As Harvard has been defeated three times on this trip, the boys are out to take Columbia's measure and even matters up.

Boxers Best in Bayonet Charge

George A. Barrie, the amateur middleweight champion of Scotland, writes Dan McKetrick that the boxers in the army are far superior to the ordinary layman when it comes to bayonet charging. "When you meet the enemy bayonet to bayonet you'd be surprised to see how much the boxer's footwork helps him. The ordinary soldier is no match for him. He'll outstep him and pink him every time," writes Barrie.

Snowy Baker in Narrow Escape

Snowy Baker had a narrow escape from death recently. While speeding along in his touring car the machine skidded and Baker and a man riding with him were tossed out. Baker's friend was killed instantly and Baker was revived in the hospital after great concern had been felt over his condition. He is about now, fully recovered.

The Art of the Navajos

Imagination in the Creations of the Natives of the Desert

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

WHEN shall we ever learn to appreciate the real character of the American Indians? The brutal, unreflecting pronouncement of one of their white enemies: "The only good Indian is a dead Indian," has had far too much influence in forming the general public judgment concerning the red men. Let us turn from the evil side of the Indian character and consider a little the better side.

Take the Navajos. Everybody has seen or heard of the wonderful Navajo blankets. People capable of producing such work, the invention of their own taste and intelligence, have, by that fact alone, earned the right to be treated with respect. If the Navajo blankets now turned out are inferior to those of a few decades ago, if they are glaringly colored with aniline dyes and decorated with patterns that lack the simple beauty of their predecessors, the fault is the white man's, and not the Indian's.

Formerly the Navajos used native dyes, of exquisite delicacy, and their designs were remarkable for the simple harmony of the combinations. But to please white people, whose taste is inferior to their own, they have adopted colors and decorative forms which banish most of the unsophisticated charm which once characterized their work. They still, however, turn out blankets, belts, garters, saddle girths, etc., in large numbers, and some of the work is comparable in beauty with that formerly produced.

The women are the weavers, simple looms being employed, and the wool comes from the large flocks of sheep and goats that the tribes raise as a principal source of food. The Navajo men are often excellent silversmiths, hammering out articles of pure silver with surprising skill.

But if you would understand the Navajo Indian as a member of the great human race, you must look at him from another viewpoint than that of his industrial capacity and artistic ability. The social and religious ceremonies that mark his life reveal the imagination, and show how far above the plain of mere brutality and savagery he exists. He has his myths, like the ancient Greeks, and some of his traditions needed only a little more poetic power to be wrought into epics.

Take the story of the adventures of the Navajo "Prophet," for instance. We can give but one passage from it, to indicate its imaginative reach. The "Prophet," relentlessly pursued by his enemies, the Utes, having traversed mountains and deserts without end, loses hope, and is hardly able to drag himself along, so great is his weariness and so sore are his hurts. Just at this crisis he hears the enemy again rushing upon him:

"But at this moment he becomes conscious that he is not alone, and glancing to one side he sees Nilci, the Wind God, walking with him. And Nilci brings a great dark whirlwind, which roars a moment beside them and then buries its point in the ground and digs a deep hole there, a cavern with four chambers."

In this cavern, by Nilci's directions, the persecuted "Prophet" takes refuge, while the Wind God scatters and destroys his enemies with lighting and hail.

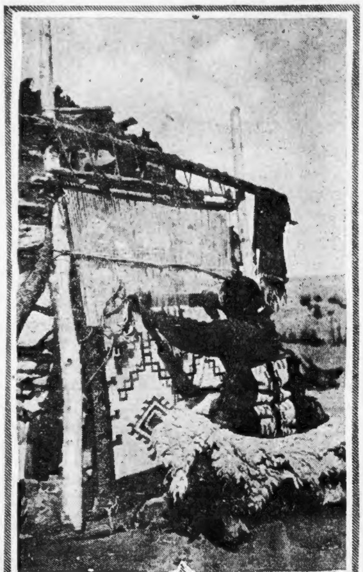

This myth, which you will find recorded at length by Dr. Washington Matthews in the Smithsonian ethnological reports, is the basis of a very elaborate Navajo ceremony called "The Mountain Chant." The ostensible purpose of this ceremony is the cure of disease, but it is also used for invoking the assistance of the gods in obtaining rain, good crops, etc., and advantage is taken of the assemblage of the people to have a good, jolly, social time.

The ceremony, which includes "fire dancing," arrow swallowing, etc., is extended over a period of nine days, and the expenses, according to Dr. Matthews, are borne by the patient in whose behalf the meeting is held, and who thus obtains social distinction in the tribe.

Connected with the ceremony of the Mountain Chant and with other ceremonies of the Navajos there is a very singular custom of an artistic nature. This is the drawing on a carefully levelled expanse of ground, of large "dry pictures," containing symbolical figures and representations of the gods, some of whose forms are nine feet long. The "painting" is done with colored powder, used dry. The colors are red, blue, brown, black, yellow, white.

The figures and designs are all prescribed by an exact system, and the artists are watched in their work by a "shaman," or medicine man, who immediately compels them to correct any error in the drawing. Erasures are made by scattering sand over the false strokes. As far as possible the work is done from the centre of the picture outward, in order that the knees and feet of the artists may not obliterate the lines and figures already drawn. In these pictures some of the adventures of the "Prophet" are represented.

Zoe---The Story of a Great Love

Crawley Begs Zoe to Explain Why She Has Acted so Strangely.

(Copyright, Associated Newspapers Ltd. Serial rights in U. S. A. held by International News Service.)

(By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.)

HE had always looked upon her as a marvellous woman, intellectually and artistically; he had always admired her fro the brilliance of her intellect and versatility and keen understanding of men and things, but at the same time he had regarded her as type of a very highly strung neurotic, a woman whose emotions were completely out of the control of her reason and will, the last woman in the world to rely upon a sudden emergency. How greatly had he been mistaken!

Anything and everything seemed possible where such a woman was concerned. He had been duped and fooled no less than poor Godfrey Brooke. But with Brooke it was so much more terrible. It was diabolical. Merciful heaven, if Brooke were ever to know!

He was not the man to take that sort of thing philosophically. A man like Brooke did not break down all the barriers and prejudices of his life and become as a child in his humble worship and adoration of a woman without being sure of what he was doing. He could see the look in Brooke's face as he stood with his broad back to the fire in his rooms in the Grosvenor road.

"She's the best woman in the world!" he had said; and the blue eyes had lighted up with all a strong man's love and trust and blind devotion. "And I'm the happiest man in the world, Crawley! Come, drink to Diana, my little woman who's waiting for me down there at Hatchington, while I am wasting my precious time talking to a moody brute like you! Here's to my little Di"——

And they had drunk the toast together—drank to Brooke's wife, who was Zoe—Zoe, who an hour before had sobbed out her love and passion at the feet of the other man.

The sudden flash of remembrance made Crawley catch his breath and run his white hands through his hair. It was a characteristic mannerism of his.

BROOKE TELLS HIS FRIEND TO CHEER UP

Brooke noticed it.

"Cheer up, old man!" he exclaimed, breezily. "I didn't mean to remind you of unpleasant things. Pshaw! Put the whole business out of your mind. A good night's rest will put you all right. Di, little woman is it too late to hear you sing us something?"

"Why no—not if you aren't too tired," she answered, readily.

"I should never be tired," said Brooke, "if you sang to me."

"But what about Mr. Crawley?"

"Do sing, Mrs.—Mrs. Brooke," murmured the artist.

His voice sounded thick and coarse.

"What shall I sing—eh?"

She swept across the room to the piano and carelessly turned over some music.

"Sing anything" said Brooke. "It is all beautiful. It is your voice I want to hear. Crawley, just you listen to her. I'll bet you've never heard anything like it before in all your life!"

Crawley walked mechanically over to the piano.

"For Heaven's sake," he whispered in her ear, as he bent over some music, "get rid of him somehow! I must speak to you."

"Hush!" she breathed. "Don't be foolish! You can trust me. You are behaving madly." Then aloud: Never mind, Mr. Crawley! I'll sing without music. Have you ever heard this little thing of Lambert's The words are by Henley."

She struck a solemn chord on the piano. Crawley sank into a chair and stifled a groan. She had sung that song to him a hundred times in the Grosvenor road rooms.

The woman was a marvel. How could she sing it now?

Her beautiful voice rang out in a sad minor key:

"Dearest, when I am dead,
Make one last song for me:
Sing what I would have said
Righting life's wrong for me.
Tell them how early and late,
Glad ran the days with me,
Seeing how goodly and great
Love, were your ways with me."

Crawley stared fixedly at the carpet. His soul was going through tortures.

"Is that all?" asked Brooke from the other side of the room.

"That's all, Godfrey."

She turned and smiled at her husband.

"What a very sad song!" he said. "Sing something cheerful, Di. Crawley wants cheering up."

"All right, I'll cheer him up!" she cried, and burst into a lively little French chansonette—a thing of the boulevards.

She rattled off another pretty little French song. She was a consummate artist and she sang divinely. How well he knew the song! How incredible it seemed that Brooke should know it, too!

"Thank you, Mrs. Brooke," he murmured when she ceased.

"You are fond of music, Mr. Crawley?" she queried.

And it seemed to the man that she was purposely taunting him, playing with him as a cat plays with a mouse.

"Very," he murmured. "Won't you sing again?"

"Do!" Brooke joined in eagerly.

"No, Godfrey," she said, rising and stretching out her arms with a gesture of weariness—"no, not tonight. It is too late, and I am sure Mr. Crawley must be dying to go to bed. By the way, Godfry," she added, addressing her husband, "you might just see if Collier has got everything ready. Will you?"

"Why, of course," replied Brooke. "I was forgetting. Excuse me a minute, Crawley."

"You are awfully good!" murmured the artist.

"I'll see you in a minute," said Brooke. "In the smoking-room—eh, Di?"

"All right, dear," said the woman, bestowing upon her husband a ravishing smile.

Their charming understanding was positively bourgeoise.

BROOKE LEAVES WIFE ALONE WITH CRAWLEY

The next moment Brooke had left the room. They were alone at last. Crawley crossed the room in a few quick strides and gripped the woman's wrists.

"What does this mean?" he whispered, huskily. "Quick! There is not a moment to be lost! What are you going to do? What do you expect me to do?"

The woman did not speak for a few seconds—seconds that seemed to the man long-drawn hours. He stared at her fiercely, resentfully. She did not raise her eyes. She was staring at the pattern on the carpet and tapping her dainty little foot mechanically against the leg of a chair. He saw that, for the moment, her armor of reserve and self-control was slipping from her. She had gone deathly white, and her bosom rose and fell tumultuously; her lithe, sinuous form swayed. His grip tightened on her wrist.

"Can't you speak?" he demanded, angrily. "He will be back in a moment. Good Heaven, Zoe, tell me what it means!"

She raised her head slowly and looked at him. All the life and vivacity had gone out of her. She looked weak and faint, and her great, sorrowful eyes were glistening with tears.

"Have mercy on me, Noel!" she groaned. "I—I am doing my best. I can't keep it up much longer. Have pity, and—and, oh, please let go of my wrist! You are hurting me."

"I beg your pardon," the man stammered confusedly. "I did not mean to. But I'm nearly mad. I don't understand. How did you get here?"

"I came down by the 8 o'clock train."

"Does he know you were up in town this afternoon?"

"No; he knows nothing."

"Hush! Don't speak so loudly! Tell me why you have done this! Why have you never told me? Can't you see what it means? Brooke is my oldest friend. I had no idea; I"——

Another Successful Wife Tells Her Story of Helpfulness

By a Successful Wife

A SUCCESSFUL wife.

These words expressed my highest ambition, and that thought, coupled with the spirit of determination to be one, spells success.

Two years ago, when we were married, our chief asset was our good health. My husband had a good position as a linotype operator in a small town at $20 per week. We paid $5 a week for rooms; $7 a week was spent for the table, and about $4 went for incidentals, leaving a balance of $4 for the bank.

I, realizing that progress would be slow at that rate, and knowing my husband to possess ability above the average, urged him to move to a large city, where there is a premium on efficiency.

At first he objected to going, on the ground that it would not be pleasant for me to leave my friends and go to live in a strange city.

But the truly successful wife thinks not of her own pleasure, but in her desire to create something substantial and binding one to the other will travel anywhere to attain that end.

For only by careful planning and much foresight can a working man and his wife spend their sunset years in comfort and in peace.

Once it was decided upon my husband had no difficulty in getting a position with a publishing house at $28 per week.

We obtained two rooms for housekeping at five dollars, the same cost as before. The first month I had a balance left of $40, more than double the amount I saved previously. I spent eight dollars on the table and my husband kept five dollars for his spending money, and it also covered our amusement and incidental bills. That left a balance of ten dollars.

The next month I kept a detailed expense account, and therein lies the secret essential to the highest state of efficiency in the home. Without such an account money may be wasted in one direction and because one retrenches in another, the resulting balance is apt to be taken as an indication of the exact maximum sum that can be saved.

At the end of the first week I was surprised with the result. I had a balance left of $14, just half the salary. By this time I had discovered ...ce I could purchase any groceries ... meats at a much cheaper place and five dollars supplied the table this week.

I never spend more than five dollars a week on the table now, as five dollars wisely spent is ample for two.

The fact is, that one who will take enough interest to keep an expense account will not waste five cents worth of anything a week. My husband, anxious to do his share, keeps but four dollars, making our total expenses for the week but $14. Now that is $56 saved every four weeks, or $728 a year.

Allowing $200 a year for clothes, insurance, dental bills, week-end trips, etc., there is a balance left of $528. That this sum is quite possible I have learned from experience.

It is a happy and congenial couple that have a good balance at the end of the year, as it represents their united effort to succeed and better themselves in life. The ignorant call it selfishness, but the understanding know it to be thrift. MRS. O. V. A.

ROSES are used by Worth to give the touch of Summer to his corkscrew model of mole-colored faille, the bands of blue velvet at the neck and wrists supplying the color note. The straw brim of the toque extends into a peak in the front, forming a support for the soft, falling Paradise plume.

WORTH defines the waist-line at the natural position as in this tight-fitting bodice of gold embroidery which he veils with chiffon. To the yoke is attached a very full skirt of black faille striped in satin. There are also the inevitable organdie points. The double brimmed hat has ostrich trimming.

"I'm sorry," said the manager firmly, "but you can't take that baby into the hall."

"Why not, sir?" asked the astonished father.

"Well, it might cry and create a general disturbance."

"Oh, lor', no, sir!" was the prompt reply. "Baby's used to going to entertainments, he is. Why, 'e was as good as gold at 'is gran'pa's funeral yesterday."

"Really, this is the most difficult course I have ever played on."

"Hoo dae ye ken?" asked the caddie, gravely. "Ye havena played on it yet."

The tailor's sign in a little inland town was an apple—simply an apple. The people were amazed at it. They came in crowds to the tailor, asking him what on earth the meaning of the sign was.

The tailor, with a complacent smile replied:

"If it hadn't been for an apple where would the clothing business be today?"

BOSTON AMERICAN
80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, APRIL 24, 1915.

When the European War Ends the Only Protection for Our National Interests Will Be Our Own Strength

Dr. Dernburg's public letter, indicating the terms on which Germany would assent to peace, shows the American people the danger which lurks for this country in the issues of the great war now raging. Dr. Dernburg says that Germany aspires to equal rights in all the great waterways, and he specifically mentions the Panama Canal as among the waterways which ought not to be in the exclusive military control of any one nation.

Now Dr. Dernburg denies that he represents officially the German government. There is no evidence that he does. But Dr. Dernburg is a distinguished German who knows the aspirations of his government, who knows what would embarrass his government and what his government would be unwilling that he should say. He understands the responsibility of prominence and the danger of imputing to the German government the things so prominent a German might publicly say under the present delicate circumstances.

Therefore it cannot be doubted that Dr. Dernburg expressed an aspiration of the German Empire. Great Britain has already indicated her identical aspirations. Russia, if she wins a way to the Mediterranean, will have the same desire, and it is natural that France, if she wins, will be entirely willing to participate in the seizure for her joint advantage of our greatest scientific and organized public achievement, which is a monument to our necessity, a connection of our great sea coasts that cost us hundreds of millions, to which not one of the covetous European nations contributed a penny. If this war should end in a draw, nothing would be more natural than an attempt by all the parties to the outrageous contest to satisfy EACH OTHER'S demands by giving away OTHER PEOPLE'S rights, OTHER PEOPLE'S possessions, the fruits of other people's toil and sacrifice.

Solemn treaties, rules of civilized warfare and all the restraints which our moral natures ought to impose upon civilized men have been ignored on land and sea during this war. At its conclusion we have no right to expect any safety for our national interests except that which our physical power to protect them may afford. If neither side is clearly the victor, then the temptation will be very strong, indeed, to reach satisfactory terms by distributing advantages at the cost of helpless neutrals.

This is the history of war in Europe. The Kingdom of Poland, within a hundred years after its courageous people had saved Christian Europe from the Mohammedans and the Austrian capital from the besieging Turks, was sacrificed and destroyed as an independent nation by Russia and Prussia and the very Austria she had saved, in the terms of peace between those warring nations. Turkey, the Balkan States, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium and the South German States have all been the vicarious sacrifices of the drawn contests between their more powerful neighbors. History repeats itself with wonderful frequency.

If on the other hand, France, Great Britain and Russia are the victors, or Germany, Austria and Turkey should win, we have again an historical precedent which warns us that the aftermath of war has its danger to us if we remain unprepared to protect our interests. Have we forgotten the Holy Alliance? Have we forgotten the origin of the Monroe doctrine? Do we not remember that after the fall of Napoleon the victors joined in an attempt to dominate the world in what was called the Holy Alliance and that their covetous eye was directed to the vast resources still unexploited in America.

BUT AMERICA HAS THEN A STRONG NAVY. She had distinguished herself on the sea in a contest with the world's greatest naval power and she had a national administration that KNEW OUR RIGHTS AND DARED TO MAINTAIN THEM. The proclamation of the Monroe doctrine was America's defiance to the victors of the Napoleonic war. It happened that England's interests for the moment lay in the same direction and the designs of the Holy Alliance on the American hemisphere proceeded no further than the formation of the conspiracy itself.

When this war is over the victors will have millions of soldiers, armed to the teeth, trained to the hour, dedicated to the theory that might makes right, with interests in Mexico inconsistent with our Monroe doctrine, with interests in the far East inconsistent with our position in the Philippines and our commercial aspirations in China, and with a covetous eye on our Panama Canal. Shall we not then be in danger if we remain helpless and give no sign of a determination to protect our rights and interests against all comers? The story of past wars and the incidents of this war warns us of the necessity of preparing ourselves for all emergencies.

The war may be over and the danger may confront us before we are completely ready, but if we have MADE A BEGINNING OF PREPARATION, if we have shown AN INTENTION TO RESIST, if we have shown that we understand the danger and are PREPARING TO MEET IT, we shall have taken a long step in the direction of safety.

There Can Be No Doubt of the Beneficial Aim of the Dental Bill

Massachusetts Dental Society, an organization comprising leading dentists of the State, has asked for legislation to give the State greater power and responsibility for the regulation of the practice of dentistry. This proposed law has the approval of a large number of local dentist societies.

Whether it is good or bad, the AMERICAN cannot judge. But as to its beneficial aim there can be no doubt. The importance of the caring for the mouth by skilled professional service cannot be too strongly emphasized. Dentistry is a serious, painstaking, skill-requiring profession. The damage that can be done, and is done, by untrained and unregulated butchers of the mouth, to personal appearance, comfort, health and even life itself is incalculable. If this proposed law will prevent unsuspecting people from the malpractice of unskilful or unscrupulous dentists, it will be a great boon to humanity in this State.

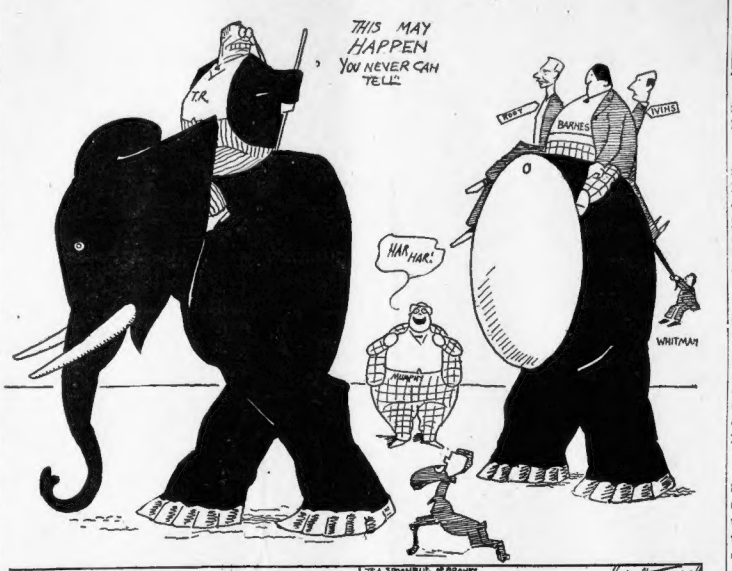

If this bill will secure the services of ADEQUATELY TRAINED nurses to keep the children's mouths clean, it will improve the health of the whole community and the scholastic efficiency of the children.

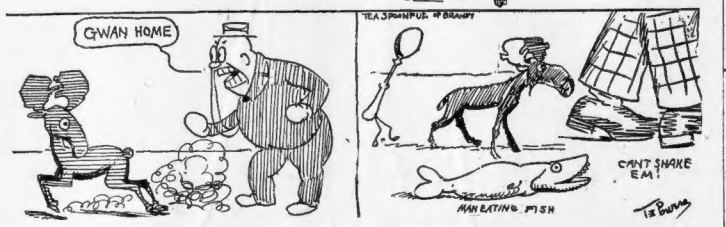

We hope that the members of the Legislature will give this bill careful scrutiny. If they believe that it will provide an effective means of reducing the danger of malpractice in this Commonwealth it ought to become law, even at considerable individual loss.

Lesson for All Women in Grandmother-Wife Who Eloped at Sixty, Says Ella Wheeler Wilcox

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

THE dangerous age for woman does not seem to limit its bounds to middle life. A woman of sixty has recently eloped with a man of her own age. After having lived with her husband since 1877 and being a mother and a grandmother she discovered her real affinity and eloped with him.

It would seem that a man and a woman who had reached the age of sixty might possess the self-control and the reasoning power which would enable them to avoid a course of action that must bring sorrow and humiliation upon their families. But it is impossible to judge of one's fellow beings without knowing their temperament, their temptations and their trials.

We have all quoted frequently the adage "There's no fool like an old fool," but few of us have stopped to analyze the causes which produce old fools. A starved youth frequently produces a voracious maturity. Men and women who marry young, and who are engrossed through all the years of youth and maturity with family cares, find life dull and commonplace when these cares drop away and leave them once more with time to think of other things than material necessities.

The romantic side of life again presents itself, and if there is a strongly temperamental tendency, with a corresponding lack of balance, trouble is certain to ensue. That is, trouble is certain to ensue if, as is usually the case, this late Indian Summer of life comes to only one of the mated pair.

It is more frequently the man to whom it comes. A man who, having fulfilled all the duties of father and grandfather for many years, finds himself with leisure and means to enjoy life, awakens to a consciousness of heart hunger, and is surprised to discover all the romantic impulses of youth fully alive in his nature.

Meanwhile the wife, who is also mother and grandmother, has "settled down," satisfied to seek her distractions in her physical ailments, and her recital to her friends of experiences with surgeons and operating tables, or in the pursuance of duties and pleasures which appertain wholly to the grandmother period of her existence. It is so long ago since she walked in the wonderfulness of romance that it is all like a forgotten dream, and if her husband should attempt to renew the old dream and to make it seem a reality she would probably call him an "old fool" and ask him if he were losing his reason.

Only a few years ago a situation of this kind developed into a great tragedy. A woman in Brooklyn of fifty odd years died suddenly and her death revealed the fact that she had been making frequent trips to New York to meet an admirer of her own age.

The woman had been for twenty years the wife of a hopeless invalid, and the role of nurse and mental comforter and companion for this husband failed to satisfy the longing of her heart; hence a revelation which brought shame and sorrow upon two families.

It is a wise thing for men and women to prepare in youth for middle age, and to prepare in middle age for the more advanced period of life. There are innumerable opportunities open in our land for the cultivation of the mind and the pursuance of arts, professions and occupations which will lend an interest to human existence when it passes out of the highway of morning, through full noon, into the afternoon shadows. Forty is an excellent age for a woman to begin the real cultivation of her mind and heart and the development of her best possibilities through knowledge of spiritual laws.

The woman who devotes an hour or two every day to such occupations and interests will not be liable at sixty to lose her mental balance or to make herself the sorrow of her friends and the laughing stock of her enemies.

SUNDAY? SUNDAY!

Calling Attention to a Four-Page Billy Sunday Section in the Sunday American, Comprising the Most Important New England Contribution Yet Made to Billy Sunday Bibliography, and Introducing Some Guarded References to a Person Known as Daniel Cupid. Come, Gentle Spring!

"In the Spring," as Tennyson says, you remember "a livelier iris changes on the burnish'd dove;" but that isn't ALL that happens.

Mr. Hank Gowdy's celebrated cognomen appears once more in the newspapers; open cars make their appearance, except on lines which are blest, so to speak, by the semi-comfortables; dancing classes announce their commencement exercises; back yards are cleaned up; there are as many canoes in the Charles, of a Sunday afternoon, as there are jitney busses in Broad street, Providence, at the rush hour; and, again quoting Tennyson, "in the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love."

Wherefore, ALL editors being young, and Sunday editors tender juvenals, there will be considerable Cupid in tomorrow's Sunday American. If it be true, as sings another poet—poetry and sulphur and molasses come with the Spring, also—if it indeed be true that "journeys end in lovers meeting," we advise all the boys of our acquaintance not to go philandering, after church tomorrow morning, without taking along each his usual copy of New England's GREATEST, BEST and MOST WIDELY READ SUNDAY NEWSPAPER.

In addition to all the latest news from every port on the Seven Seas, in addition to the War views of the War experts, in addition to the funniest drawings of the greatest comic artists of the world, piled high on all the other good things which make this Sunday journal the leader in New England, the Boston Sunday AMERICAN will contain TWO unique love stories worthy of their favored nooks in Mr. Cupid's Hall of Fame.

ONE of these truthful chronicles of the tender passion is the love story of Billy Sunday, told by "Ma." We shall not attempt to tell this delightful story HERE, in the few lines at our disposal, and SPOIL it, but in the interest of the fast growing go-to-church movement we WILL say this: They met for the first time at a prayer meeting! Read the story, boys—and girls—and cut the movies and the bungalow dance-parties, at least ONE evening a week, in favor of the "regular weekly meeting in the vestry."

And the OTHER story—ah! dear young Yankees—the OTHER love story is just a whangdinger of a love story because it has to do with a little French-Canadian beauty, a sewing-girl, indeed, and the blue-blooded son of a mighty and widely known Boston millionaire, who met one day by chance, most wonderfully, who recently were wed, and who will live happy together always!

The young heroine of this modern love story of New England was born in the little Quebec village of Saint Louis, not so many years ago, and the boys here in Boston. Read, in the Sunday American, young friends, how Cupid marked them out for one another and how Fate—Fate and the revolving door of a Boston department store—did the rest. Read, and say no more that love matches are passe and Romance lives no longer.

What American citizen is the most talked of man of the day? Col. Roosevelt? No. Jess Willard? No. Billy Sunday? You said something!

Wherefore an entire section—four pages—of the Sunday American will be devoted to stories of and by and around the Rev. William Ashley Sunday, ballplayer-evangelist.

"What Billy Sunday Thinks of the Devil;" "Mr. Sunday's Greatest Sermon;" "Mrs. Sunday's Advice to Girls;" "Ma Sunday's OWN Love Story;" these are sample titles.

Homer A. Rodeheaver, the famous music master of Mr. Sunday's Tabernacle, contributes an illuminating article on "How Sacred Music Moves Men to Religious Fervor," while Mr. Richard Washburn Child, of Boston and Cohasset, famous in the magazines as the author of some of the best short stories of the time, is the interesting author of "The Mystery of Mr. Sunday's Grip on Sinners' Hearts."

Little Sadie Bakeman's invitation to President Wilson, to come to a Cambridge "party," is the excuse for a half page of pictures of Sadie and her mates of a select dancing school. Another half page of lovely photographs 'minds us that the day of Mrs. Butler's May Festival is almost at hand.

The attention of Mr. Thomas E. Powers having been attracted to the various reforms instituted at Sing Sing by Thomas Mott Osborne, the new boss of that strictly up-to-date penitentiary, Mr. Powers has drawn a tender little offering for the Sunday AMERICAN, entitled, "We Sing of the Sing Sing Cinch!" THIS cartoon by Mr. Powers is guaranteed to crack a smile in the faces of railroad ticket agents, theatre ticket agents, telephone operators, and all the other heroes and heroines whose work-a-day lives bring them six days out of seven into close communication with members of the Grouch family.

KINDLY remembering, if you will, that one has here been able merely to HINT at a FEW features of the Sunday AMERICAN, that the price remains the same, and that positively the ONLY way to be sure of your copy is to SPEAK TODAY to YOUR REGULAR NEWSDEALER.
